What is Fennec?

Fennec is a decentralized peer-to-peer digital currency that allows users to send funds and store wealth online without any third party.

Fennec is one of many cryptocurrencies, but it is our belief that it will become a respectable store of value within several years.

Why Fennec?

The fennec fox is a small crepuscular fox native to the deserts of North Africa, ranging from Western Sahara to the Sinai Peninsula. The fennec is the smallest species of fox and is adapted to survive in extremely harsh environmental conditions. Many cryptocurrencies do not have strong enough communities or market stability to be considered truly dependable assets. We believe the Fennec cryptocurrency will adapt to future environmental conditions, very similarly to the fennec fox!

What is your vision?

More than anything, Fennec aims to be a community of miners, holders, enthusiasts, and crypto advocates that enjoy the company of one another. Through social media outlets and other forms of engagement, it is our goal for the Fennec community to intertwine and help one another achieve material, social, and fundamental success in life.

What is the difference between Bitcoin and Fennec?

Because Fennec is a fork of Bitcoin, it functions very similarly, besides the fact that block time is 2.5 minutes (4x faster than Bitcoin) and on the YescryptR16 algorithm (ASIC resistant). This will enable miners with old ETH mining equipment to quickly recalibrate their machines and take part in the Fennec network, which (for the foreseeable future) will have a drastically lower hash rate than ETH had! The fundamentals of bitcoin are something that the Fennec team takes pride in and referring to the Bitcoin whitepaper for more information about this code base would be a great place to begin further research about Fennec!
